

Education & Training, Human Services, Hospitality & Tourism

Career Opportunities: Working with People.

The Human Services cluster is the largest and most varied occupational area out there. One can enter any one of these fields with minimum training (restaurant hostess, cook, or lifeguard) or with one or more college degrees (child psychologist, teacher, or coach). Those that choose a career in one of the social and human services fields should find personal satisfaction in helping others and seek to promote safe, healthy communities around them.

Did You Know...?

Two year schools are a great way to get your basic classes out of the way without spending a lot of money. Many offer associate of applied science degrees and/or certifications that qualify you for work as soon as you graduate. However, you can always choose to continue your education at a larger, four-year school and earn a bachelor's degree. Start looking now to see what your best options are!
